

WIT's Careers In Action: Leadership Foundations is where fast-track women meet success.

You've moved beyond the junior-level position into a leadership role – how can you ensure success at being an effective leader with influence across your entire organization? WIT's Careers in Action is a series of leadership development programs designed to provide up-and-coming leaders the skills to take the next step in their career. WIT is offering Leadership Foundations, which focuses on enhancing crucial skills needed to be an effective leader.

You can blaze your own trail with WIT's Careers in Action: Leadership Foundations program.

Who should attend Leadership Foundations?

WIT's Leadership Foundations is targeted to women who are first-line managers or individual contributors with management responsibilities.

When you've completed WIT's Careers in Action Leadership Foundations, you will have learned:

- > How to develop a personal vision for leadership, and understand how to effectively execute a plan to realize that vision
- > The importance of goal setting, and how to set your own goals
- > Powerful communications skills to help you lead at all levels within your organization
- > The difference between management and leadership – and how to work each to your advantage
- > Important negotiating skills
- > How to effectively manage conflict
- > How to build social capital within your networks

WIT's Careers in Action: Leadership Foundations offers two sessions per year, each taking place over the course of six months for $1750 for both sessions. All training takes place in metro-Atlanta.

“WIT's Leadership Foundations has given me the tools to take my career to the next level. My career advisor helped me stay on track with my goals, and networking with my peers and learning how-to strategies from the executives has given me more confidence in my leadership abilities.”
